I am sending this email to comment on the Microsoft Settlement about the pending settlement between the United States Government, several individual states and Microsoft Corp.

I find the settlement to be too lenient for Microsoft. The settlement does not do nearly enough to control Microsoft's monopoly. Microsoft is now trying to take control of the internet through its .net initiatives.

A more appropriate settlement would have been to split Microsoft into three or four companies. The proposed settlement is just a slap on the wrist for the company and if it is approved, Microsoft will continue its monopolistic practices to the detriment of the computer industry.
